COURSE DESCRIPTION:
Students will study leadership theories, skills and practices necessary for effectiveness in varied entrepreneurial settings, including private businesses, corporations, not-for-profit organizations, and social movements.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

There are five films assigned for this course. The Calendar section of this syllabus identifies the movies and the dates by which you should watch them. If you have seen an assigned movie previously, please watch it again in its entirety, viewing it through the lens of leadership theory. Please study and evaluate each film in terms of the insights it provides about leadership.

The assignment of a film is not necessarily and endorsement of the beliefs, mores or behaviors depicted in the film.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES: Upon the successful completion of this course, students will be able to:
1. Identify and describe major leadership theories and the researchers associated with those theories;
2. Describe the behaviors of effective leaders in a variety of situations;
3. Discover the personal, behavioral and situational factors in a leadership situation that lead to success or failure;
4. Use self-assessment tools to evaluate their own level of leadership development;
5. Identify the skills of effective leaders;
6. Discuss the leadership strategies of leaders depicted in popular culture and the media;
7. Create a leadership product that demonstrates the level of the student’s awareness of entrepreneurial leadership principles.

TEACHING STRATEGIES:

Content is delivered through student review of textbook materials including self-assessments, on-line lectures, and media including feature length movies, discussion boards, project development/presentation, and exams. A strong emphasis is placed on allowing students to project text-based principles onto media observations in an effort to link leadership theory to effective leadership behavior in an entrepreneurial context.

Films will form an important part of the source material for course discussion. The assigned textbook outlines leadership theories and the underlying research that supports and critiques those theories. The text will also explore the behaviors and attitudes of both effective and ineffective leaders, with an emphasis on entrepreneurial settings. The course will rely on popular culture depictions of leaders as a springboard for the discussion, analysis and synthesis of key entrepreneurial leadership issues.

Over the semester, the student will view several films that focus on entrepreneurial leadership in many different organizational settings. Based on the films, the class will participate in online discussions of major leadership concepts as illustrated in the films. The students will complete two online exams (both multiple-choice) that will measure their knowledge of leadership theories and research. As a capstone (course ending) project, the student will choose a film other than those that are a part of the course and will create a film discussion/teaching guide that clearly links behaviors in the film to tenets of entrepreneurial leadership discussed throughout the course. In preparing this final project, the student will demonstrate the ability to apply the knowledge gained in this course to settings outside the previously assigned course films.
EVALUATION METHODS AND GUIDELINES FOR ASSIGNMENTS:

Exams (2 @ 15% each): 30%
Discussion Board Participation: 35%
Capstone Project: 35%

EVALUATION AND GRADING: A number of approaches will be used to evaluate student outcomes and grade performance. Each student will be graded on two midterm tests, posts on the discussion board, a personal leadership portfolio and a final exam.

Grading Scale:

The graded materials will be tied to the learning objectives in the following way.

Exams: (30% of the course grade).
Two multiple-choice exams (40 to 60 questions each) will measure the student’s knowledge of the basics of contemporary leadership theory. Accordingly, these exams will evaluate the student’s knowledge of personal, behavioral and situational factors contributing to leadership effectiveness. The exams are open book and are timed. The grade will be based on the percentage of correct answers.

Learning Objectives Evaluated:

1. Identify and describe major leadership theories and the researchers associated with those theories;
2. Describe the behaviors of effective leaders in a variety of situations;
3. Discover the personal, behavioral and situational factors in a leadership situation that lead to success or failure; and
4. Identify the skills of effective leaders.

Group Discussion Board Posts: (35% of the course grade).
Using discussion boards within the Blackboard system, students will discuss readings and films assigned for the course. The film discussions will be loosely shaped by study guides that link themes in the films to leadership theory and research. The time frame for each discussion issue will be approximately ten days with specific dates identified in the Course Outline/Calendar. Students will be expected to:

1) Post their initial reactions to film content including responses to the study guide questions early within the designated time period
2) Follow up on the initial posts by reacting and informing the postings of their classmates and the instructor.
Both types of discussion board postings will be graded mainly for responsiveness to the assignment, clarity of expression, application of course readings/lectures to film content, sophistication of the comments, and to a lesser extent posting length.

Learning Objectives Evaluated:
1. Identify and describe major leadership theories and the researchers associated with those theories;
2. Describe the behaviors of effective leaders in a variety of situations;
3. Discover the personal, behavioral and situational factors in a leadership situation that lead to success or failure;
4. Identify the skills of effective leaders;
5. Discuss the leadership strategies of leaders depicted in popular culture and media.

Capstone Leadership Product: (35% of the course grade).

Students will choose a feature-length film other than those viewed as part of the course and will prepare a film discussion guide for that film. In preparing the film guide the student will demonstrate the ability to apply leadership theories discussed in the course to the film of their choosing. An example entry from a study guide might include:

In scene 12 (58:14 minutes into the film) Tom says he imagines a day when there will be no more poverty. He then goes on to persuasively argue that the elimination of poverty will cause a significant decline in wars and societal violence. In this scene Tom paints a vivid vision of the future for his followers. This connects to Chapter 8 of our textbook and our module 7 lecture which discusses transformational leadership. One component of transformational leadership is inspirational motivation which Tom is accomplishing with his vivid portrayal of a very different future. The scene can also be used to illustrate the power bases and influence tactics of a leader as Tom relies on predominately “XX” power and “YY” influence tactics in this scene. The following questions could be posted to the discussion board:

1) Do you think Tom is acting as a transformational leader in scene 12?

2a) If yes, what do you observe about his verbal language, his body language and his appearance that aid in his being regarded by his followers as transformational?
2b) If no, what do you observe about his verbal language, his body language and his appearance that detracts from his being regarded by his followers as transformational?

3) What bases of power does Tom evidence in this scene? Are they consistent with how he has exercised power up to this point in the movie? Was this an effective use of power?

4) What influence tactics does Tom deploy in this scene? If you were asked to be Tom’s leadership coach in this situation would you advise him to use the same or different influence tactics? Why or why not?
While the above is one example of how the capstone product could be approached I will be providing you with no later than the middle of the semester with other examples of how students structured their capstone course product in prior semesters.

The capstone course product should be emailed as an attachment to twmullin@uncg.edu no later than midnight, December 5th.

Learning Objectives Evaluated:
1. Discover the personal, behavioral and situational factors in a leadership situation that lead to success or failure;
2. Use self-assessment tools to evaluate their own level of leadership development;
3. Identify the skills of effective leaders;
4. Discuss the leadership strategies of leaders depicted in popular culture and the media;
5. Evaluate the leadership strategies needed in entrepreneurial settings; and
6. Create a leadership product that demonstrates the level of the student’s awareness of entrepreneurial leadership principles.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY POLICY:
Each student will sign an academic integrity policy statement for all major work in the course.

PARTICIPATION/ATTENDANCE POLICY:
Students are expected to keep up with the course schedule. Occasionally technology problems will arise so it is suggested that students strive to complete their assignment roughly 48 hours or more in advance of the assignment deadline. Though the nature of an online course allows for some discretion over when course work is completed, some activities such as discussion boards have a limited time window (typically 9-14 days) and other activities such as exams have more specific time windows (typically less than 24 hours). The specific due dates are identified in detail in the Course Outline/Calendar.

FINAL EXAMINATION:
The capstone leadership project serves as the final exam for this course. You can find the due date for the capstone product in the Calendar section of this document.
