Catalog Course Description: Applying behavioral theories to understand consumer consumption behaviors and the effect of environmental and psychological influences on the consumer decision making process.

NATURE AND PURPOSE OF THE COURSE

Consumer Behavior is the most exciting area in the study of marketing!

Consumer behavior is omnipresent; we cannot escape it – every moment of our lives we are engage in some form of consumer behavior. It involves the interaction of affect, cognition, behavior and the environment in which people conduct the exchange aspects of their lives. It examines the consumer decision process and the impact of external environmental influences (culture, subculture, social class, reference groups, family, and personal influences) and internal psychological influences (personality and lifestyle, learning, motives, perception, and beliefs and attitudes) on consumer decision making. It explores stimuli that informs, persuades, and influences our choices, purchase decisions, dreams and aspirations.

This course is intended to provide you with two fundamentals (a) theory about consumer behavior and (b) an understanding of how consumer behavior concepts can be applied to marketing management (the hunters), to our roles as consumers (the hunted), and to everyday life. The study of consumer behavior uses concepts, theories, and principles from the social sciences to extend our understanding of factors influencing the acquisition, consumption, and disposition of goods, services, and ideas. You will learn how and why consumers behave by examining how we use products to define ourselves and how this self concept affects our attention and perception, our motivation to buy, our memory for brands, product and advertising awareness, our brand attitudes, product judgment and choice, customer satisfaction and brand loyalty. With this in mind, our objectives are as follows:
Course Objectives
1. To provide you with a solid conceptual base for understanding the behavior of consumers within society and the marketplace.
2. To develop your abilities to apply consumer behavior concepts to marketing problems that are likely to involve consumer consumption, with identity and lifestyle implications.
3. To extend your understanding of research methodologies that can be used to investigate consumer behavior and guide managerial decision-making.

COURSE FORMAT

The format of the course includes short lectures, cases (written & video), guest speakers and topical roundtable discussions facilitated by teams. Lectures and cases will serve to organize consumer behavior concepts and clarify the material. Roundtable discussions will correlate real examples from the business world. Assigned chapters, exercises, articles and cases should be read prior to their discussion in class.

* There is a significant amount of reading and hands-on experiential exercises that is required for you to fully understand the concepts.

Note: Grades are non-negotiable and final grades can only be changed to correct calculation or input errors on my part. If you have questions as to the validity of a grade this must be brought to my attention in writing within one (1) week of the day/date the grade is posted.

Grades WILL NOT be determined by a standard bell curve whereby the majority of the class receives a ‘C’ and the minority receives otherwise. Rather, grades will strictly depend on the number of points accumulated relative to the total number of points allotted in the course. Your personal/special circumstances are NEVER considered in the calculation of your grades.

Note: All submitted work may be checked for plagiarism. To avoid discrepancies, be sure to cite appropriately works of others that you are referencing. For details on what constitutes plagiarism, please visit http://academicintegrity.uncg.edu/.

CLASS PARTICIPATION

Class participation is expected in every class meeting. To reinforce this expectation, I may randomly select students at the beginning of the session and throughout the ensuing discussion (whether or not the student's hand is raised). This is your class and you should make it as interesting as possible by sharing your examples and experiences. In grading class participation, it is assumed that everyone starts out in the middle, with for example, 50 out of the 100 points and individuals move up or down based on their performance. Points are assigned at the end of the course. Here are some ways you can impact your grade:

Late Work, Absences, Etc.: Some students, because of work-related obligations, may have to miss one class. If you fall into this category, please let me know ASAP. We will work out a schedule if the situation warrants it.
Grading class participation is necessarily subjective. Some of the criteria for evaluating effective class participation include:

1. Is the participant prepared, and do his/her comments show evidence of analysis of the case/article/readings, thereby adding to the group’s understanding of the situation/content/concepts? Does the participant go beyond simple repetition of case/article/readings facts without analysis and conclusions? Do comments show an understanding of theories, concepts, analytical devices presented in class lectures or reading materials?
2. Is the participant a good listener? Are the points made relevant to the discussion? Are they linked to the comments of others? Is the participant willing to interact with other class members?
3. Is the participant an effective communicator? Are concepts presented in a concise and convincing fashion?

EXPERIENTIAL INDIVIDUAL ASSIGNMENT

The experiential assignment will focus on the practice of capturing and analyzing consumer data. Using qualitative methodologies, students will explore specific facets of consumer consumption behaviors. A description of the assignment and requirements will be posted on Canvas, and will be discussed in further detail in class.

ROUNDTABLES

In-Class Roundtables: In order to keep class discussions interesting, and to draw in your specific expertise, a series of Roundtable discussions are planned which connect class topics to real-life experience. You will each sign up for one-night’s roundtable, which focuses on selected concepts from the text. The names per roundtable will be posted on Canvas during the first week. Your job will be to lead the class in discussion of the issues, present the questions, and connect the issues to real-world examples from the marketplace. More importantly, your job is to show how the course concepts and frameworks are useful tools that can be applied in the real world. *Make a 1-page handout for the class, plus a 2-5 page write up (attach a copy of the 1-page you distribute to the class) for me of your goals, your logic, and what you hope to accomplish in your roundtable, and include a copy of power point slides (2 slides per page) if used.

Note: As the text/chapters relating to each roundtable are extensive, there should be NO OVERLAP between the presentations. Further, your discussion IS NOT A REGURGITATION OF THE TEXT, but an application/demonstration of content (theory/framework/concept). All presentations must include/address what are the implications for marketers.

Roundtables: Voice of the Consumer

The verbatim text of what consumers say must be included in the respective Roundtables. In other words, the voice of the consumer is critically important. Therefore, you must include as exemplars of your arguments, findings, and theoretical concepts, actual verbatim of what the consumer(s) actually say.

Be sure to include demographic descriptive (e.g., age, gender, ethnicity, education, occupation, marital status, etc.) of each consumer who participates in your assignment.
Topics and Date

Feb 1: Roundtable on Influencers, Consumer Learning and Product Failure
Consumers learn from product information, purchase, use and disposition. Describe (show evidence) products that are successful and products that are failing due to poor consumer learning. Do consumers always learn everything correctly about products? Do they always follow directions? Applying the different theories in the text, explain what is the marketer(s) doing right/wrong and what is happening to the consumer(s) (i.e. response, reaction, etc.) in terms of learning/not learning. What are they learning vs. what was intended? Bring these products to class as part of your presentation of the roundtable. What are the implications for marketers – apply the behavioral learning theories or cognitive learning theories to your recommendations for marketers.

Feb 15: Roundtable on Consumer possessions and the extended self
For some consumers, personal possessions become extended parts of the self. Your task is to interview several consumers to determine if there are any possessions they consider a part of their extended self-concept and the manner in which that possession became a part of their self-concept. First, construct an interview guide with the questions you will ask, utilizing the text for guidance (your consumers will not understand the terms self-concept or extended self-concept and you should not use these technical terms in interviewing lay consumers). Specifically explore how consumers’ self-concepts play out in their possessions. What part of the self does this product represent for the interviewee? Then, compare two consumers who named the same product. Explain how the possession described/discussed relates similarly or differently to the individual’s self-concept. Describe/present ALL your findings using verbatim text of what your interviewees actually said. What did you learn that you could apply if you were a marketing manager of that product? What are the implications for marketers?

Feb 22: Roundtable on Consumer Psychographics
Construct a brand personality inventory for 3 different brands within the same product category (see chapter for details on brand personality dimensions). Develop an interview protocol (list of questions) and interview a small number of consumers (5-7). In addition to interviewing them, have them rate each brand on about 10 different personality dimensions (see textbook). What differences can you identify based on their ratings? Do these “personalities” relate to the advertising and packaging strategies used to differentiate these products? How do these personalities relate to the interviewee psychographics (e.g., lifestyle, AIO’s). What are the implications for marketers?

Mar 8: Roundtable on Buying Decision and Stereotypes Perform a survey of country-of-origin stereotypes. 1) Compile a list of 5-10 countries and ask people what products they associate with each. What is the quality of products associated with each? What attributes are known about products that come from each of these countries? 2) Prepare a brief description of a product, including a list of features, and ask 4-6 consumers to rate it in terms of quality, likelihood of purchase, value, and so on. Make several versions of the description, varying only the country from which it comes from. Do ratings change as a function of the country of origin? How does this explain the power of country stereotype? What are the implications for marketers?

Mar 29: Roundtable on the Influence of Children in Household Decision Making Children learn over time what and how to consume. How do children learn, make and influence purchase decisions (give some specific product/brand examples)? To add depth to your roundtable, go to a toy store, a toy department or a cereal aisle in the grocery store and watch several interactions between a parent and child. Report on how the child (children) navigated the isles. Explain how children “made their wishes known” and how parents reacted to their children’s “needs and wants.” Ideally, speak with the child with the adult’s permission and also with the adult if possible to get further insight. Recognizing the influence of family and other non-family members in purchase decisions, what do/can marketers do? How are the theories relating to learning manifest in the marketplace? For example, apply the learning theories to children in terms of “children see, children do.” What are the implications for marketers?
Roundtable on Subcultural Influences on Sacred and Profane Consumption

Prepare a list of holidays that are oriented toward a particular subculture. Find ads that reflect this type of focus. Interview several members of subcultures other than your own (e.g., African American, Hispanic, Asian, Caucasian, Catholic, Mormon, Jewish, etc.) to discover what types of products or services are purchased because of membership in this particular group. Show the interviewee your ads to determine what are their perceptions of your ads, the products, the marketer, the brand? What are their perceptions of ads that specifically target them? How do they celebrate the holidays on your list (i.e., types of activities, consumption, etc)? What are some marketing implications? How can marketers encourage consumers to pay attention to their messages?

Feedback on Roundtables: Each individual will receive feedback on their section of the roundtable. The delivery mechanism will be via email, and will be sent before the next class meeting. Individual grade will be assigned at that time.

MIDTERM & FINAL PROJECT

A significant part of your course grade will be determined by a team project. As professionals interested in marketing, you are all going to be part of teams that work together in finding solutions to common marketing problems. Therefore, as part of this course, you will be required to carry out a team project in which you explore a particular marketing phenomenon, propose and carry out a study that examine this problem/issue, and discuss your findings.

The midterm assignment is directly related to the final project. Each team will focus on one (no duplicates) of the following options for the final project:

1. Explore consumer perception of the marketing of Marijuana
2. Explore consumer perception of the marketing of Vaping.

Midterm Project: For the midterm assignment, each individual member of the team will create a written document (12 pages maximum including references) relating to their specific segment of the project the team has undertaken.

Each of the options contains several layers including organizing and summarizing existing related research on the topic. The team will create a preliminary roadmap of 15-20 (or more) articles (both academic research & a few popular/practitioner press) that they will use to understand and further frame the issues/situations that exists relating to the topic area. This reading list will then be divided and each individual from the team will have responsibility of analyzing and summarizing their assigned set (combination of academic research and popular/practitioner press) articles. Further details will be provided. Note that Wikipedia (Wiki’s) is NOT a credible source and should not be included or cited.

Final Project: Extending the midterm to the final project, the teams will conduct primary research to fully explore the topic areas. The research will comprise using the qualitative methods of depth interviews and photographic documentation, to uncover consumer perceptions. Summarizing the findings, identify the key consumer perception themes uncovered from your interviews. Based on these themes, what are the implications for marketers? How can marketers use this new knowledge in their efforts to connect and build relationships with consumers?

Paper & Presentation: Each team will (1) create an overview of the project as the introduction section of the paper; (2) organize and combine each individual member’s midterm (literature review); (3) create a section describing how you approached each interview (method and data collection, including demographic descriptive of each participant (i.e., gender, age, ethnicity, occupation, education, marital status, etc.); (4) report/describe the findings from the interviews; (5) identify the implications for marketers and the impact in building consumer relationships.

Format: Both midterm and final project must be typed (double spaced), and professionally presented to the class. The final project should be no more than 30 pages, including the literature review, data analysis results etc. All sources of literature should be referenced using the APA, MLA or Chicago referencing style. Failure to reference will be a cause for plagiarism per UNCG handbook.
Each team will turn in the transcribed interview notes with your coding. This must be a separate document, and NOT attached or pasted in the final paper.

*Further details will be given in class and posted on Canvas relating to each of the topical areas for the project.

Group Meeting Time: Communicating/meeting with your group members outside of class may require extensive use of technology. This is strongly recommended. Each group will have access to each member including a discussion board, email access, virtual classroom and file sharing via Canvas.

*Every effort will be made (but not guaranteed) to allow for the last 15-20 minutes of each class to be reserved for your group to meet. If there are questions regarding the project, come see me early. Don’t wait until the last week when it’s too late to seek help.

Contribution of Group Members
The business workplace is a social environment where you must work with others to achieve the goals and objectives of the entire organization. Therefore, 50% of an individual’s group project grade will be based on the work produced. In other words, 50% of YOUR project grade is in the hands of your peers.

❖ Peer Evaluation: Each member of the project teams will provide evaluative feedback on the performance of each individual group member. You will give yourself a rating and provide comments on the contributions each member (including yourself) made toward the successful completion of the project. The ratings provided by each group member will be taken into account in the final calculation of the individual’s total grade for the project. The onus is on you to contribute 100% toward the success of the project and to work well with your team members.

❖ A peer evaluation form will be made available via Canvas to each student in each group before the last day of class. Each student will award from 0 to 100 points for each member's efforts on the project and the sum will be averaged. In addition, you will have an opportunity to comment on the quality of each team member’s contribution to the successful completion of the project.

Classroom Conduct
We subscribe to the UNCG professional standards. Please arrive on time for class with uninterrupted attendance for the duration of the class. I will endeavor to end class on time. Furthermore, please maintain a professional atmosphere. This includes, but is not limited to, using respectful comments and humor, employing appropriate manners and decorum, utilizing computers and technology suitably (e.g., silencing wireless devices, no web-browsing or emailing), and refraining from distracting or disrespectful activities (e.g., avoiding side conversations and games). Refer to the following for more details on school policies and procedures: http://www.uncg.edu/bae/faculty_student_guidelines.pdf.

Absence: If you miss 2 or more classes in a 15-week semester, you should not expect to receive a passing grade. In other words, excessive absences will be reflected in the final grade. All assignments must be handed in on time; late work will not be accepted. If you must miss a class, the onus is on you to connect with your classmates to get up to speed on the material covered, handouts, etc.

The instructor reserves the right to make changes to this document as needed**

Note that occasionally, changes in the schedule of the course, or in the assignments, are announced during class. Equally, materials may be added to increase your knowledge and efficiency in a particular subject area, as well as articles to read in preparation for the next class. It is your responsibility to connect with Canvas to stay abreast of changes, additional material, etc.

Laptop Policy: You are allowed to use your laptop in class for the sole purpose of note-taking, or accompanying the websites we may visit during the discussion. Surfing, IM, games, paying bills, checking emails, etc. are not class related activities and must not be done in class. Recognize that it is sometimes quite obvious when you are using your laptop for non-class related activities. Abuse of the laptop policy will impact your grade, and eliminate your privilege of using it through the remainder of the course.

Inclement Weather: We will follow the directions of the institution.
ACADEMIC INTEGRITY POLICY

http://academicintegrity.uncg.edu/complete/

Students are expected to recognize their responsibility to uphold the Academic Integrity Policies of UNCG. Failure to do so will result in Academic Integrity Sanctions as stipulated by the university.

Plagiarism: Representing the words of another, as one's own in any academic exercise. Plagiarism may occur on any paper, report, or other work submitted to fulfill course requirements. This includes submitting work done by another, whether a commercial or non-commercial enterprise, including Web sites, as one's own work. Faculty should take into account whether the student has had the opportunity to learn appropriate citation procedures based on previous course work successfully completed before formalizing Academic Integrity charges.

a. Failure to cite references range of sanctions: From requiring the student to re-do the paper to a zero on the paper

b. Submitting, as one's own, work done by or copied from another range of sanctions: From F on assignment to a recommendation for expulsion.

   Includes work done by a fellow student, work done by a previous student, or work done by anyone other than the student responsible for the assignment.

Falsification: Intentional and unauthorized falsification or invention of any information or citation in an academic exercise. Falsification includes knowingly reporting data, research, or reports so that either the process or the product is shown to be different from what actually occurred; falsely reporting having met responsibilities of attendance or participation in class, practicum, internship, or other types of field work experience; or submission of falsified excuses for attendance or participation in such experiences. Falsification also includes submitting work to meet the requirements of one course when it was done, in whole or in part, to meet the requirements of another course. Exceptions to this provision must be given prior approval by the instructor to whom the work is to be submitted. For Graduate Students, range of sanctions: From F on assignment to a recommendation for expulsion.

1. Facilitating academic dishonesty: Intentionally or knowingly helping or attempting to help another to commit an act of academic dishonesty. Facilitating academic dishonesty includes acts that may not directly benefit the accused but assist another student in violations of the Policy.

   a. range of sanctions: From F on assignment/test to a recommendation for expulsion
