INTRODUCTION

Welcome to Management of Organizations. This is a required course for the management concentration in business administration and a recommended elective or pre-requisite for other programs of study. Understanding that students will have diverse backgrounds and interests, we designed this course to provide value no matter your career pursuit.

Specifically, we have designed this course to help you see management as a class of problems to be solved in all aspects of life rather than a type of a position to be secured. Like any type of problems, solving management problems requires particular skills and ways of thinking. We will give you a taste of what those skills and thinking styles are like over the course of the semester with the hope that we pique your interest in learning more. Due to our limited time and focus, though, we will emphasize just one of those skills and ways of thinking: questioning assumptions. Questioning assumptions is a key part of critical thinking and is the mark of truly educated people. That said, you will have to learn the “book answers” as well as how to challenge those answers to succeed here and in life. Learning how to question assumptions helps us improve at anything we want to do better.

Jason Pierce, Assistant Professor

COURSE LEARNING OBJECTIVES

A. Concepts & historical perspective to understand modern organizations and the role of management therein.

B. Knowledge of management goals, functions, principles, and processes that promote organizational effectiveness.
C. An overview of how the specialties of the various business majors fit into the overall scheme of business.

D. An understanding of business ethics and corporate social responsibility and how these are critical to business success in the long term.

E. An understanding of globalization, cross-cultural influences on business, and global partnerships.

F. An understanding of how leaders and managers differ and the need for cross-cultural, global leadership styles.

G. Knowledge that will serve as a foundation for development of leadership, teamwork, analytical, and decision-making skills.

H. How to question assumptions and conventional wisdom about management.

COURSE METHODOLOGY

Reading and in-class activities are the primary vehicles for learning in this course. Chapters from our textbook will provide the starting points for our in-class activities so it is essential that each student read assigned chapters prior to each class. This preparation will not only improve your in-class experience but also your performance on course evaluations.

COURSE MATERIALS

Required text:

IMPORTANT: You are required to bring your text with you for each class except exam days.

<tr>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>100%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Make-up policy: If you miss an exam for any reason, you have 1 week to contact me by email to schedule a make-up. The make-up will be given orally and any course material will be fair game for questions. Most students prefer the written version and make every effort to be present on exam day.
EXAMS

Our course is broken up into three modules of four blocks each. Each module will conclude with a non-comprehensive exam. Exams will be short answer questions, mostly asking you to define or describe the concepts we study and explain why they matter. Students who do the reading before class and come to class usually do very well.

PROFESSIONALISM GRADE

Students who miss the first week of classes will be dropped from the course. Otherwise, I have no attendance policy. Each student is responsible for knowing all information given in class even when absent, regardless of the reason. I use the professionalism grade to give credit for contributions to in-class discussions. Zero contribution will lead to a professionalism score of 5% out of 10%. Advancing the conversation with insightful comments and questions will earn extra points whereas engaging in disruptive or problematic conduct will lead to you earning less than 5%, or even, negative points.

CLASSROOM DECORUM

1. When class begins, I will shut the door. If arriving late or leaving early, do so quietly.
2. If you would like to have a private conversation during class time, please leave the room and do so outside. Students who fail to demonstrate this courtesy will be invited to take the place of the professor and teach the class.
3. During class, mobile phones must remain turned off completely. Those wishing to use computers or tablets for note taking must sit in the back row of the classroom.
4. Any situation or complications not covered by the syllabus must be brought directly to the attention of the professor who will either render a decision or refer the matter to higher authorities such as the department chair or appropriate dean.
